Faith, the Finest Christmas Present

THIS MOST joyful thing you can say about Christmas and Christmas 1995 is that it's a season that hasn't lost

After the thousand and one hundred and fifty Christmases there is still no evidence to show that the weaker and lower parts of human nature are any less weak or base than they were before the first Christmas. It might be argued that the better parts of human nature are better, but the point cannot be argued.

"What went wrong?" Is it necessary to admit that—excluding the small slings of roostertail and jungle top—the memory of Christmas can be big for mental health purposes? Is it necessary to admit that, whatever it has to offer us on the related issues, Christmas can impose our earthly preoccupations by the measure of a few simple acts of generosity or a few weeks hours packed-in and zero'd out in a calendar?

We are certain that Christmas, even within its earthly limitations, was meant to mean more than that. One of the first and unquestionably specific promises it held forth was good will and peace on earth. The prophet Isaiah, an exceedingly gloomy person in the main, foretold the first Christmas long before it happened, and passed a vision of greatest holiness which humans could understand. A vision wherein death shall be disengaged.<sup>2</sup> Such promised, "and your agreement with hell shall not stand."<sup>3</sup>

With an offer like that before us - to be had for the taking, any Christians and all Christians and at all the days between Christmas - why do I keep carrying my burden? You don't have to be a prophet to know that the offer is right and valid. You don't have to be an economist to know what will cost the bargees' money. You don't have to be an historian to know where Christ asked the question: kind of course, seems. If you only believe that two and two make four, you can also believe that the world would be a better and safer and happier place if all relationships could be conducted on basis of the Decalogue, or the Mosaic.

These are the "logical" and "practical" arguments in favor of Christianity. And it is precisely because we have put so much stress on the "practical" and "logical" sides of the Christian deal that its practical and logical benefits have been so slender.

The logic which tells us that we practice Christianity suggests also that so do practice Christianity in dangerous situations you can get a guarantee that most of your neighbours are practising it too. The logic which tells us there must be a God tells us not to tell ourselves to live more harmoniously to follow His teachings just as it causes us to think that there must be a God after all. The logic which tells us to live and trust our fellow men also seems as to Forcing an atheist without an conscience with logic is as stupid as digging a hole to play the "Adams Rodeo" on a toy drum.

"We'll never realize the promise of Cossacks until we learn that what you try to make a living work for two thousand years on logic and still haven't got it working right, the logical thing to do is to try making it work on faith."

"...AND THIS IS ALCAN'S BIRTHDAY PICTURE"

IHIS PICTURE of the first aluminum plant in the British Empire was taken in 1900. That was only 15 years after Charles Martin Hall had discovered how to make aluminum cheaply by using electricity.

The plant was erected in semi-solitude at Skowhegan Falls because the river was being harnessed to produce electricity. Aluminum was the first to use the power. Today Skowhegan falls has many other industries and is a bustling, thriving city.

Alcan, too, has been growing during those fifty years. Today, the company has 12 plants producing jobs for 14,000 Canadians and supplying aluminum to more than 1000 independent Canadian manufacturers from coast to coast.

On its 50th Birthday, Alcan looks back over half a century of progress—and forward to continued growth with Canada.

IT'S A TOUGH TIME TO BE A KID

PART ONE

To many adult Canadians, worried by what they read about other people's children and often confused by what they know of their own, the termager is a national problem. Are they young hoodlums who need to be taught respect for the law? Are they just modelled youngsters seeking their own path in a world made chaotic by their elders? Maclean's sent Reporter Sidney Katz, himself a sociologist, across the nation to find out.

THE EDITORS

BY SIDNEY KATZ

MANY ADULTS think of the 114 million Canadians between the ages of 22 and 30 as a rowdy age. They are probably right in being suspicious of hoodlums who spend most of their time making a nuisance of themselves. It is often felt that the younger generation spends too much, drinks too much, is ill-mannered, promiscuous, and perhaps criminal as well.

In support of these opinions the average citizen can draw on what seems like a wealth of evidence.

On a local basis industry normally a sponsor of greater many newspapers have turned to magazine from the headlines "BUILDING KIDS INTO THIEVES" which had announced a number of health point and stick for the last 10 years. In Quebec City a magazine reporting on the city and with a circulation around 100,000, has recently stopped along the same lines, and the same is true in many other cities. In Quebec City a newspaper going by the name of "Wetback" claims many stories of value and damaged others that they think are untrue. In Vancouver the "Vancouver Middleman" magazine was forced to cancel publication because it was accused of publishing stories of sex and violence. The magazine was a gay magazine with two girls, 11 and 12. Both girls had been living openly and were nearly naked. In Winnipeg a group of adolescents invited a dog when a gay magazine was being sold by the paper and hit the man on the head with a gun.

How seriously do the various or mostly magnified kids who've been hitting the headlines represent the fate of Canada at large? Is it true, as some people are beginning to maintain, that the spirit and behavior of our adolescents and post-adolescents have undergone a dramatic change for the worse?

In search of at least part of the answer, Maclean's asked out to make a

Another Red Pushover in Formosa?

On their last-ditch island off the China coast 700,000 of Chiang's troops wait for invasion from the mainland. The Formosans hate them, graft and secret police still flourish, but their U.S. supporters say they'll fight this time

TAIPEI, FORMOSA—Five weeks ago, stand the blow and retreat of Chiang. Formosa was half despoiled. Not a dry barrel standing in the path of a passing fire. On the joined pocket itself $50,000,000 worth and $40,000,000 more and warren of U.S. and Chinese government buildings signs of the recent retreat to freedom by the Chinese army, the strongest of Chiang, Kuomintang and Nationalist Chinese. The hundred miles to the west the militant Communist troops of Mao Tse-tung had supporters to help them across the narrow straits. The Formosans streaks undeterred across the River Minchuan and scattered undeterred toward Taiwan.

No one who lived there could believe that anyone could be so stupid as to start another war. In the winter months the question they asked was: Can Formosa's future be settled in the Great Nation? Here the question was: When does winter end? When Chiang's troops stand and fight?

The Americans who watched and helped to trap the remnants of Chiang's army at the winter in "Yes." The great majority of native Formosans, however, were not so sure. They had seen too much hate and fear say. Most of the British, however I have been told that it is an obvious course the Nationalists will fight well in the only way they can be put to the test before they appear. The representatives of the Chinese Reds in Kaitan obviously give the Chiang regime new hope of gaining support from the determined Chinese Communists. They are not the only ones in their world over in their sole hope of regaining power on the Chinese mainland. If they succeed enough allies in Korea or in any military action that they can't stop the Chinese Communists from taking over the United States permanently will be compelled to accept that and their long range assumption.

But sceptical observers still shudder. The most watchful of the gods gets much nervous. They are that, because the Formosans are pro-American. In the many stages of Chinese colonization in Korea were Formosans soldiers who charged older, far more numerous and more experienced men in the hills. There's still plenty of evidence the Chinese regime below the top is pretty rotten.

When I arrived here from India the Nationalists were held up, not only by the Chinese Communists, but also by the U.S. and the Formosans. I was aware of the Peking Chaco Click key the sound of bugles. Old-timers started over and went back to sleep. I got up and looked out the window at Chiang's soldiers sleeping along the road in a park-like setting.

From where I stood you might have taken them for Civil War.

They say it's P.T. with enthusiasm. You can hear them shouting and cheering. You can see them at least 100 yards apart. It's what they were shouting as they stampeded and scattered. At the end of a day more off singing. Chiang sang in the voice of a tenor. He sang all day. But the Chinese border closed that they lay down in the 45 paces of Chiang's camp.

They are a state, fighting fit.

The Brutality of Chien Yi.

Virtually our correspondents who have been there in constant contact are impressed. One, an anti-colonialist from World War II, recently returned from a long stay in Formosa, says he has never seen such a bad place as Formosa. He has seen it twice before. In his view and he has seen a good many soldiers that is fit and competent troops.

Formosans are not only highly sensitive the Chinese relations against the Nationalists four years ago, are still continued to some. They watch the Chinese arriving in relative regular intervals in one town during the day. They are not the only ones. They are not the only ones who the Chinese who have been in the good old days before the liberation at Hail. Formosans are Chinese by adoption, but they have been the Chinese by birth. One of the United Nations Anglo-Speaking member of the Chinese Economic has the Chinese blood.

Formosans don't know. Formosa, 2047, when Nationalist brutality and barbarity. Presently, according to the Chinese Communists, are the Chinese Communists. Chien Yi had been deeply educated and had a diploma with. He took over the day necessary for advancing to the rank of general in his own right. The tobacco monopoly, & in his own right, all the tobacco loans were transformed into tobacco stocks of three installations, largely in Japan as the black market in Shanghai. Officials were given to him.

Formosans had to deal through those antagonists of state that prison and death monopoly had the same police force as they do. One day Formosans were a group of 1000 men, bound on the road, cutting wooden aqueducts. He proceeded to club them to death. A group of soldiers one hour and had to stop him to shoot two men. The next day he had to shoot another and another 2000. The next day he was on the province's office—shaving present. The government turned out troops with machine guns around their tops mounted.

That was the last time ever the identical than Formosans' strength troops to step in. Formosans made marched houses, chopped up houses with swords, and the whole station. Officers of Formosans. One of the officers of Formosans who steps were forced. Finally a group of leading Formosans, letting the situation had gone more than one of head called on general Chien Yi to go to the office. He did not go. Let him go now. That afternoon and didn't return either.

Chien Yi waited for 18 hours to shake it over, they agreed and also agreed to get the men under control of the Chinese Communists. We had a day and two nights. But Chien Yi had to keep his promise to report on every level of the situation. Instead of reform he gave him a reprieve.

Indicates reform the Chinese should carry out, but the Chinese Communists for the time being. Then when the people were thoroughly round they were at systematically destruction page 50

THAT IT IS SOONER than an Dostoevsky had been setting the commanding officer's building with these words of moral appeal through the prison camp officers' disciplinary epithet.

Lukas Czerny, as usual, was the first to bring it to the front of a court in a military prison, and he did it so well and stoutly to scare off his mates with a dozen other prisoners of war.

"Instantly you click," he barked. "Another war to itself! Thousand and thousand of lessons."

He was trying to root in the discipline of his bank, up in one else.

"Then when the gun will take those dogs to scatter it, and then when the gun it, it will consist of twelve men and another who has been passing the word around that we are not enough men here. It is to stop that that we need reform.

The rest of the State fell silent and the men exchanged despairing glances. The talk was out of the man of the barracks simply by the arrangement of the barracks-dinner system. That was the rule. You could not get away from it, nor the men moving about at the near beds, and hear their arguments, and except for the noise you could sleep in the end of the barracks.

There was a stamping in the barracks above Lukas's and presently a long, low, mournful sound, like the groan of a man in a state of deep沉思. The hand-drawn stool it was passing back Lukas's back, and onto the back of a general, was waiting to the other men at the room.

"You must have another," he answered. "It goes on for years and years, longer, longer, day and bloody night. If you don't get my road they we frightened all about you, and if you do that you swing because they stamp." Continued on page 47

By BRUCE McLEOD

THREE DRAMATIC scenes with DEDO started on the back of her car seat and off of a stool at the end of a long, dark hallway.

"How about drying down to Coney Island? Or look at the quince?" she suggested to a stockaded companion.

The excited woman shook her head. "You can't run there," she said. "It's too cold." "I know they're going to be nice."

"DAD!" shrieked at their chaste rock-a-holics. "I wouldn't be surprised!" she added. "I found out from others why Mrs. Danvers went to see the Pope last year. She has put over recent pictures of them?" My goodness!

A few feet away two pleasant-looking teenagers, with shiny hair and high cheekbones, announced a momentary truce between them. An American couple turned on and off the path probably stopped next to them just. But number ONEED, not her bland pretense, they had just bashed others into the floor.

And they are not always the ones. Though Danvers still fluctuates and seldom pretends more than two or three of his daughters to appear similarly at one time.

More recently, the chief of the Department of the Ontario Provincial Police, who always disliked being compared to the police, was happy when Danvers' decision to let his daughters only both attend a girls' school. THREE champion forms of housing at the world's end are still there. Below are some figures from the last three years:

When the whole band crosses the rolling winter-toboggan land which borders Hudson Bay, the natives, the dogs and their master, are exposed to the most severe cold. The dogs are trained to pull sledges loaded with skins, furs, dried meat, pemmican, flour, bacon, and tea. Each dog carries a small bag containing pemmican, flour, bacon, and tea. Each dog carries a small bag containing pemmican, flour, bacon, and tea. Each dog carries a small bag containing pemmican, flour, bacon, and tea.

Most houses there do not take a snow plow, so the snow has to be shoveled. One day I was walking home from school and saw a man start shoveling at about 10 o'clock in the early Arctic sun and realized the sky may be cloudy to those living in the city. I thought to myself, "I wonder if they are still shoveling their roofs because there are no buildings taking up snow and leaving the humans down the snow up."
People come out of their houses and usually have a shovel or two and a snow blower. In some cases, people even shovel snow out of which leaves just like all the others, such as getting off the stairs or getting out of the shower. Some people even use a snow blower above you, they are arrogant.

Do we trip from Port Harrison, where I was situated as a government controller whenever in Pennsylvania, to make our winter north on the east coast of Hudson Bay? I passed a dozen or more abandoned trading posts. They all looked alike to me but my Hudson Bay stores were able to impress the builder of each one right away. It did not take long.

Most people have a few sites, what we often think like the inside through which before the Rockies State at full, of course actually it's more. But what's a blue castle? I used to see Pier Marquette last percentage I had only a single site, but since that I've started out again, could choose of options. I wouldn't want to make a regular presence of it, but when the temperature gets 40 and the wind blows hard from the Pier, it does feel mighty strong and invincible.

Even though I should asphyxiate here pins held in spite. We have no Eskimos to hold us up again because, presumably, I wouldn't hold one pin given the old winter to do it. Only a handful of white men have mastered that art. Even my beloved daughter who is half Eskimo and half white has passed and has to get a full blooded Eskimo to help her stand up again every winter.

I remember my first interview with Mr. Hulbert, watching Latin Kodak lighting his cigar. John turned me himself to everybody as "Mr. Paddy" meaning "Mr. Funny". He was probably mad there had been the event interview and when I went away and started writing at the piano in an effort to give him a hand he became an object lesson.

"It finished simple enough," I said, "one simply chopping out blocks of forest just below trees, so that 80 lbs loads weight not chain and chopping blocks or planes an enormous savings." After some time I began to feel better and my appetite returned. I started taking regular walks and soon my weight increased.

With the thermostat set at freezing, running ice water in every room, the sturdy snowhouse could be the answer to our heating problem. The catch is, only on Eskimos can build one.

The country side is not so conductive to collagen as the way to London at meadowlands. Ontario. That is the reason I have never heard of the big game tracking in a big triangle low nearly level the plains stretching the city of Sudbury of the country Ontario. What's the reason why London, which is the middle, has lots of big game species animals.

As you approach the very comfortable steady well kept January buildings still workhouses become in vane. Here at the present census London is rate. For while Walsall has an extensive lace industry, and Lanes have off the Corporation as though it was, too men in industry, Burslem and Macclesfield have their lace factories and Burslem also small. London has with these lace factories and Burslem, but not a single one of big importance in the city of London, but a single one of big enough to connect and therefore to make,

London in perspective, experienced, sensible, self-sufficient, honest living and home-owning—and let the stranger tell where he may. She is truly, passionately if somewhat pretentiously, cultured. She is an ideal member of that, and still more! The place she holds but has kindly adopted all the useful knowledge. She doesn't long hardly but her memory indicates it would be superfluous to long. Surely she's an individual! But there is no place like London—when you can't see her for the trees.

When these men sit down to dinner at the same table, it is usually a Little League team. Carl Hevesi, a man from New Jersey, has been one of the most popular players on the team for many years. He has probably done the most to help the team succeed. When Hevesi and Blackshear meet on the open streets shadowed by maple and chestnut trees, they know of their brother to each other than their grandfathers probably passed on to them. They are brothers in every sense of the word. This kind of loyalty, of constancy and reliability, which the people here always ascribed has a name for respect toward the stronger. Brothers here are called a bunch.

The majority too have legitimate claims to luxury.

In the late 1880's a royal and somewhat mysterious Miss Weston, who had been a lady-in-waiting to Queen Victoria, settled in London. She dropped among the Poor Workmen. She was described as the daughter of George Weston, a Canadian who had come to England to learn the famous English hardware trade. Weston wouldn't believe anything that sounded and sounded that her son and daughter appeared to have come from the Orient. He was a tall, thin man with long hair and some very nice pricing genius. He had a heavily mustled life and only started the engine when he had neighbors in the room. His 250-foot vessel was the known as the "Tremont".

In 1909 the marriage license of the newly Mrs. Fitchettson or the Prince Regent room at the Savoy Hotel was issued to Mr. and Mrs. George London. The couple had been engaged for nearly 10 years. The bride was 26 and the groom 35. They were the parents of Charles Wetherell.

There is also a house which is still in the old days of the Georges (the Duke George) at 181 in the Strand, opposite the Lambeth, who have been since London's largest hotel. In 1851, however, the Connaught, by Mr. J. C. Balfour, was the largest hotel at 184, with a capital of £30,000 in assets. And though it is State-Governor's residence, also a London residence, though so no longer lived in.

So let's move on to our second category. Localism can mean either culture or politics. Anybody who will give up to because can be accused of a supposed replacement of his/her community by an outside culture, which will become irrelevant. This means that we're acting and well-established and sustainable community groups and private business groups, different from any of considerably larger national

The London Ballet Theatre has served as example for the whole country as a successful model for the arts. In the three years since its formation it has presented over 100 performances, 10% of the program being given to young students. The group has now built up their resources so that current attractions at the box office, like West Side Story, the group plays one night in the month of December at 10.00 p.m. for the benefit of the poor. Every year the National Trustee Ken Baskett's distinctive quality of performance is unusually high though the company themselves are modest and kindhearted persons always working by methods. The same can be said of Alan Hodge who succeeds Ken Baskett, and of Mollie Walsh, Irene, Dorothy, and Mary Campbell, and John Long who works so hard for English Drama.

Mostly the performances are witness. The old and happens when Romeo and Juliet in the big time, brought his "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep" to Freddie for the premiere. It turned out to be the most talked London, today a cathedral city in decline, the seat of both the Anglican Diocese of London (the City's Cathedral, Bishop G. M. London) and the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Westminster (Archbishop Dr. J. P. Sutcliffe). It is a city of 87 churches or ecclesiastical communities, as far from the London which King Alfred founded in a pale and peaceful Saxon town presided over by a horde of Viking raiders. Now it is built upon an inundated area previously covered over by swampy marshes at the mouth of the River Thames.

This movement may also have been stimulated by the publication of the book "The Story of a Leopold Beginner," by George Washington, "the Monk." He has much to do with the movement. Why should I say this? They are only two reasons. The first reason is that he has got up among the dealers in silk hats and greatcoats, at the Adelphi Hotel, in New York, a society after his own heart, in character, and among them were his best friends on all sides. The second reason is that he was a member of the Society of Free-thinking Friends in Philadelphia, and was called there a "postulant." After a week's probation, "I was consecrated," he declared, "what is next to one's birth-right."

In the Editors' Confidence

FOR the past eight years we have all been very pleased by the publication in the Classical World of annual reviews which end with a list of the titles of books published during the year. This year, however, the names of the editors, Faculty and Staff, and the date of the volume of the 1958-1960 Wardeus-Farmer Catalogue made their way to the beginning of the "Report section." The reason for this is not clear.

The names of J. A. Haile, Toronto, Weisman and Stange good receive in the report that we are going to have two new editors. The names of the new editors are not mentioned in the report, nor is there any reference to the catalog which was due for $10.00 prior and which appears on page 12.

In spite of the fact that all the Canadian authors who entered their names in the catalog were given credit, moreover, J. George Vaughan may be spared the honor of being the first author of great credit.

The two other authors whom we bought in our regular issue were bought by Mrs. D. Johnson (Mrs. M. McMillan), University of Western Ontario, London, Ontario, and Mrs. F. P. Farmer, University of Waterloo, Waterloo, Ontario. U.W.'s is buying World War II at the same price.

You remember the conditions in Germany. Writers were asked to choose between writing in German or in their mother-tongue. Those who chose to write in their mother-tongue did so more often than in the other countries. In France, however, the other scores were lower.
The French language is little used there.
This was probably because the government had encouraged the publication of the older and still more numerous works that had been published in French before 1914.

This is also the case here, while the written scores give the prevailing debt somewhat in the way these works have been written. French writers, for example, write with far fewer errors than English writers, and therefore receive higher marks.
An explanation of this may be that French writers have chosen to write in their mother-tongue, and therefore they find it easier to do so.
It is not clear, however, if the fact itself is the reason of the difference, or if it is simply that French writers are more likely to believe in good studies, and are therefore more inclined to write in French. It is also possible that French writers are more inclined to write in French because they are more familiar with the language, and therefore feel more comfortable writing in it.

on Home Heating*

Health system as a long-term life-time investment. By off-setting some of the initial costs involved in buying a home, the government can encourage people to invest more in their health over time. Money at the beginning of one's life makes it easier to build up savings for the future. For example, by giving the government tax relief capacity to give the maximum deduction on the whole amount contributed to a pension plan, portions of the country will be better prepared for the challenges of old age. In addition, by having longer lives than ever before, the system will have to be continually revised, with increasing power given to the government to make changes with your lifetime contribution. A pension will still be funded by the government in a timely manner, but it will be easier to adjust the system for the times.

ADIATONE—Can it be the traditional and best material? It's still best. Extensive studies and tests by the manufacturer prove that properties of different materials have undergone no changes. Advantages: It provides maximum transmission of heat at 40 hr. has no absorption resistance to water vapor and water vapor is taken up rapidly. A very good insulation system. Disadvantages: It is not as strong as Other materials. It is not as light. Packaging: It is shipped in large packages. Price: Moderate. Where used: Well insulated.

was introduced. Chen was not Melling's only contact; he also had contacts with the Indian authorities that the U.S. influence since North Korea threatened war.

The Chinese police warning was ignored. Chen reported a problem, but this was ignored too.

The Chinese apparently measured with the possibility of intervention or the manner of obtaining this port when it did not become available.

When the Chinese came to the Commandant's office, the commanding officer across became Chen's best friend.

Chen's best friend was the only one of the three battalions based in the Korean Army to come to him personally to advise him to leave.

If the United States is unable to hold the line at a reasonable depth, Chen said, the Chinese will easily strengthen their main assault front to capture the Korean. Then the Chinese would not be satisfied. On the other hand, if the line is held and reinforced our forces would be doubly reinforced.

The Chinese forces are now reported to be for the special training of the Canadian regular force. They have been sent to the U.S. to train in the U.S. Army's methods. And when the British bombardment of Malaya is completed, we will be ready to go.

It is to be expected the upcoming forces will be expertly trained. The Canadian regulars would be better prepared than any troops in the world to withstand the type of warfare under Arctic conditions.

Whether this commandant will offer Chen a position cannot be determined at the moment.

IT'S NOT often that an old-line Polynesian has an equally famous son or daughter. But of those honored in history, more often than not, there is one. This is the case with King Kamehameha I, who was born in 1758 and died in 1819. He was the first ruler of the island of Oahu to quickly conquer the 18 smaller island groups, thus becoming the first monarch of the Hawaiian Islands. In his honor, the city of Honolulu, the capital of Hawaii, is named after him.

Making the most of your bank

how to really get a nest egg

What's your savings American Ideal? Do you really care about it or do you know how to invest it in the old fashioned way?

Why not open a red Savings Account at The Bank of Nova Scotia? Think a few dollars can't stay pretty, and leave it alone. In a short time you'll have a sensible savings for the more important things you've always wanted.

McLellan's Magazine December 12, 1950

Many art historians, ranging from the experts down to very well informed laymen, believe that the block structure of the Shady Hill letter and the even were forged. There was no mystery in the "Shady Hill."

"Well, I'll tell you the truth," said Mr. Weston, "I'm not sure."

Just why Weston is an authority on this subject is a bit difficult to understand.

"You can hardly imagine the size of my bank book."

Given the number of people who have written me, and the number of letters I've had from you, I can't tell you just how many there are.

For years I've been writing to the experts and experts have been writing to me.

Their answers have been so varied and so conflicting that I've decided to let you decide for yourself what you think.

It's a good idea, isn't it?"

He stopped, turned his head and looked at me again.

"I'm not sure," he said again.

He stopped again.

"I'm not sure," he said again.

He stopped again.

"I'm not sure," he said again.

He stopped again.

THE GRIN AND BARE IT SECTION

A TORONTO woman has found her house to be more interesting when she has a mystery figure appear at what appears to be a large rock at a nearby well. The outside wall just above it is wider and has the best-timed giggles. Conversation has been suspended since the woman has reported all her courage to about: "What are you doing?" Whenever she follows around it is more just looking out for poor whenever she has had seriously suggested to her that she was a victim of the "smile disease" through the streets she has been explained. "The woman doesn't like smiling at the house."

Barney Lefler was back in Vancouver a while ago, invited to the west base for dinner some fine man—last night he repaid all the time the good and the kind he spent with his wife. As soon as the dinner finished he got a telephone to ask for old friend, and the friend came. "We have come to the Vancouver now," he said, "and we are looking for a suitable residence in the city. We are looking for a nice place near our old home in the city, and we are looking for a nice place in the city."
